Bullet Proof Glass Stops Robbers

Bullets Fired at Bullet Proof Glass In Orland Bank Ricochet And Wound Bandit

Shortly after nine o'clock Wednesday morning, two men, one of short stature and of swarthy complexion, the other tall and slim, entered the Orland State Bank and walking up to the cashier's window said to George E. Gee, the cashier and M. A. Strand, assistant cashier, "This is a stickup, give us the money." When this was refused they opened fire point blank at both bankers, who however, were safe behind the bullet proof glass with which the cashier's cage is protected. The shots barely made a dent in the glass. Both bandits seeing their attempted holdup was a failure, hastily ran from the bank south on Beacon street and then to a sport model automobile with a gray top which was parked under the Wabash bridge. One of the bandits was seen to collapse when near the car and his companions helped him into the car and quickly drove away southward. It is thought that the bullet this bandit fired against the glass, ricocheted and wounded him. There were two accomplices in the car waited for the bandits.

Miss Kay, a clerk in the bank and two customers Will Homering and John Heron were also in the bank at the time of the shooting but were not molested by the bandits.

Within ten minutes after the attempted holdup, a small army of state highway police were scouring all the highways in the vicinity of Orland for the bandit car of which no trace has been found.

"The Tinker", A Great Success To Be Repeated

The play "The Tinker" given by the young people of the Orland Park M. E. church last Friday night was well done. Every member of the cast carried their parts exceptionally well. There was one or two present who saw the original cast put on the play in Chicago. They said the Orland group compared very favorably with them.

Every one present seemed to enjoy the play very much and some very interesting comments were made concerning it. The humor and tragedy of the play either held the audience in laughter or tears most of the time. It is indeed the master piece that the critics said it is.

There have been many requests by those who were and those who were not present to give the play again, so that all might have an opportunity to see it. It was decided to give it again at Orland on Friday night, March 4th for the benefit of those in Orland who have not seen it, also for those in the neighboring communities who wish to see it.

Action Promised On Wolf Road

Definite action was taken toward an early completion of the paving of Wolf Road to connect with the Lincoln Highway at a meeting of the Right of Way and Bond Issue Committees of the Will County Board of Supervisors at a meeting held Monday, February 22nd, 1932, these Committees acting in conjunction with our local Village Board, and others.

Mr. William Kampe, Frankfort Township Supervisor, has been very active in our behalf, and the cooperation extended by members of the two Committees mentioned is unquestionably going to settle this long drawn out affair, very shortly.

These Committees have spent more time on this Wolf Road paving than on any other road in the County, and are determined to see it out of the way at once, by completing the paving.

Tinley Park Hears States Att. Swanson In Stirring Address

The George Washington program sponsored by the Tinley Park Lions in the auditorium of the new school, Tuesday evening was a very interesting one. The new Tinley Park community band under the direction of Edwin Hirsch, made its first public appearance on this program and was well received.

The presentation of the Washington bust to the school by the P. T. A. was carried out in a very patriotic manner.

The Tinley Park Post 615 of the American Legion presented the colors.

State's Attorney John A. Swanson of Cook County was the speaker of the evening and spoke of the life of George Washington and his ideals. He pointed out that to add to the fame of Washington was as impossible as adding lustre to the sun.

He reviewed Washington's youth, his greatness as a general, as the first president and of his wise counsel in matters of state and drew a an outline of how Washington's wisdom can be applied today in affairs of our national, state and community life.

Rev. Albert Buddenhagen, pastor of the Zion Lutheran church in Tinley Park offered the invocation and Rev. Mr. Loeppert, pastor of the German and English M. E. churches offered the benediction and the renewed dedication of the 4,000 trees planted by the Lions last spring as a part of the Washington Bi-Centennial celebration. Lion President A. O. Mokena Citizens Asked To Stop Closing of School

The citizens of Mokena and the taxpayers of school district 159 in which the Mokena school is located, are being asked to help the school board in a financial crisis in which the board finds itself.

A mass meeting was held at the school auditorium on Thursday night at which the matter was discussed. F. A. Tooley acted as chairman of the meeting and stated that owing to the tax crisis all over the state, and the fact that Will County is collecting its taxes in two installments this year, namely in March and in July, the money due this district will not be received until late in the summer or fall and will not come in time to pay off the indebtedness of the school district. In other words the school board has plenty of money due it, but the treasury is empty.

Mr. Tooley explained that the Rock Island railroad pays 40 per cent of the school tax in district 159.

County Supt. Aug. Maue of Joliet was present and explained that the Mokena school has $4500 in tax warrants to pay off, these warrants having been issued to pay off part of the building debt. In June a bond of $1000 and interest of $750 is due. The tax rate of the district is $1.37 1/2 cents which is the limit. Supt. Maue said. With the reduction of tax valuations 15 and 25 per cent, it means a cut in taxes.

Supt. Maue showed that the Mokena school board cannot issue any more tax anticipation warrants until the new budget is made in August.

The Mokena school board is in need of $5,000 in order to meet its obligations. The only manner in which they can raise the money is by asking the public to subscribe pledges for loans to a fund to be handled by O. A. Bartels, cashier of the Mokena State Bank. Pledges can be paid in three installments and will bear interest at 6% and are to be paid back by October 1, 1932. The pledges will be secured by teachers warrants.

If the $5,000 are not raised the Mokena school will be forced to close as has been the case in Hammond and will also be in Rockdale where the schools will close March 17th.

The salaries of the Mokena grade school teachers total $3800; those of the high school teachers $3200, the later being paid out of the non-high school fund and does not come out of the district.

Only $1850 in pledges were raised Thursday night and of this amount $705 was pledged by the teachers and the janitor. One teacher had to borrow money to pay her pledge with. The response being slow, the school board members have been asked to make a house to house canvass with the aid of assistants with a view of raising the money so badly needed.

Tinley P. T. A.

The Tinley Park Parent-Teachers Association met at the school Tuesday afternoon and celebrated the George Washington Bi-Centennial with a fine program. There were 29 members and mothers present, including the teachers.

The program chairman, Mrs. Trudie Swisher had a nice program planned, but due to lack of space it cannot be printed in full this week. Games were enjoyed in which all took part. Prizes were awarded.

The refreshment chairman and her committee served cherry pie-a-la-mode. And was it good!!

At this time the association president Mrs. A. Anderson thanked Mrs. Anna Hirsch for the beautiful donation made to the P. T. A., by her sons in the form of an attractive plaque bearing the names of all the past presidents of the association, and their years of service.

This plaque will be placed in the front corridor of the school. This gift was greatly appreciated.

Some of the members were unable to attend due to illness. The association hopes that all the ladies who were present and not members, will be at the next meeting and join. They will be pleased to have them. The next meeting will be the second Friday in March at 1:30 p. m. in the first grade room.

Will County Board Chairman Quotes Interesting Figures

The Will County Board of Supervisors met last Tuesday to consider the request of the Taxpayers League to cut county expenses and after much discussion the matter was left for future consideration. Mr. Lentz, chairman of the county board read the following report to the board:

"I wish to take this opportunity to bring before this board a matter which to my mind is of concern, not only to this Board, but to the public in general.

"In the past few months there has been, as you know, an investigation going on, relative to County expenditures, by a committee of the so-called Taxpayers League. I have no objection to this investigation, in fact I feel that the people in general should take more interest than they do in the affairs of the County Board and other taxing bodies.

"The part of this whole affair that has agitated me, is the mis-statements that have been made thru the press. I am not informed as to who is responsible for these mis-statements, but inasmuch as they have not been corrected or retracted by the Committee, I assume the idea to the public that this County Board functions very inefficiently and without any regard for the public in expending public money.

"I have compiled here data, taken from the official records in the Court House, comparing the same with the figures of the investigating committee as published in the newspaper.

Wabash Makes Important Train Changes Sunday

Orland Park is going to have a change in suburban service on the Wabash rail road beginning Feb. 28 in spite of a petition protesting this action by commuters of the road.

F. J. Carlos, assistant trainmaster and Clarence Hackenson, passenger agent of the Wabash called in Orland Wednesday and said that as the suburban trains being annulled have been operated at a loss, they could not be kept in service.

In the morning the St. Louis train arriving at Orland 6 a. m., will be run as a local train from Orland to Chicago and will take the place of the train formerly leaving at 6:10 a. m. The new time table for Orland is as follows:

Lv. Orland
No. 12—6 a. m. daily
No. 30—7:15 a. m. daily
No. 32—9:35 a. m. daily
No. 36—3:15 P. M. daily except Sunday only.

No. 34—4:30 p. m., daily except Saturday and Sunday.
No. 38—6:55 p. m. daily.

Lv. Chicago:
No. 13—9:30 p. m. daily
No. 39—5:45 p. m. daily
No. 35—3:25 p. m. daily ex. Saturday and Sunday.

No. 37—2 p. m. Saturday and Sunday only.
No. 33—8:25 a. m., daily
No. 31—6 a. m., daily except Sun.

The new change means that the engine which used to be kept at Orland about as long as the Wabash has had suburban service to Orland, will remain in Chicago nights. As a result of this change the night engine watchman at Orland is done away with, and two engine crews also. Conductors overtime is also saved. The change means a considerable saving to the railroad each month.

Mokena Garden Club Holds Colonial Tea

The Mokena Garden Club outdid itself Monday afternoon, February 22nd, when it sponsored a George Washington Tea, held in the High school auditorium, under the chairmanship of Mrs. John Balaz, assisted by Mrs. Tom Moore and Mrs. Nels Sorenson.

The guests were club members, the Junior members and their mothers, seventy in all being present. An exceptionally fine program was given by the Junior Club members and their leaders, namely Mrs. F. A. Tooley, Mrs. Harry Mail and Mrs. A. Braun.

Tea was served buffet style. A George Washington Bi-Centennial folder was presented each guest as a souvenir. A cherry pie, baked by Mrs. Wm. Lowe was won by Mrs. L. G. Bruder, the club president in a guessing contest.

The program was so good that it will be repeated in the near future. Watch for further particulars.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

The $20,000,000 relief measure for Chicago has been passed by the house of representatives and the senate and has been signed by Gov. L. L. Emmerson. Legislators of the downstate area are to be complimented on their action in assisting the passage of this bill. It is an emergency relief bill that affects not only Chicago and Cook county, but the whole state. The unselfish spirit with which the members of the house of representatives and senate responded to this pressing need shows that there is no line of demarcation between Cook county and downstate, but that state-wide interests are first in the hearts of all Illinois citizens.

Bradford, director of the department of conservation, has a great plant at the state fish hatchery at Spring Grove, according to an article in "The Fox Valley Mirror," published by Leonard Fowler. The Spring Grove hatchery is one of the finest in the United States.

The American Tree association, Washington, D. C., is giving without charge a certificate issued by that association to each person or group of persons planting a memorial tree. The only requirement is to register the tree with the association by letter advising the kind of tree planted and by whom planted. It is Mr. Hemingway's hope that one million trees will be planted in Illinois this year.

SANTA CLAUS

JUST as many children speaking many tongues have gradually converted the name of Saint Nicholas into the familiar American Santa Claus, so his many admirers in many different nations have created the conventional Christmas saint out of a figure which was in real life very different.

Nicholas was bishop of Myria, in Lycia, Asia Minor, during the Fourth century of the Christian era, the youngest bishop in the history of the church. His father was a wealthy merchant, and Nicholas by inheriting his fortunes was enabled to build up for himself a reputation for generosity and benevolence toward the poor that has lasted down the centuries. It is a matter of legend that Nicholas, because he disliked to be thanked for his gifts, once dropped a purse of gold down the chimney of the hut, where lived a poor old man and his little granddaughter. Instead of landing on the hearth, however, the purse fell into one of the little girl's stockings, hung up before the hearth to dry. Thus commenced the custom of hanging up Christmas stockings for Santa Claus to fill.

How the grave saint of the early Christian church became the jolly fat Santa of today is another story. His figure and smile-wreathed face he borrowed probably from some jolly pagan good-fairy such as were worshipped before the Christian era. His gay red costume is the contribution of Russia, where he is a patron saint. His reindeer are the gift of admirers in Lap-land.

MAGGIE

THE hero of that familiar song, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," was its author, George W. Johnson; its heroine was Maggie Harris, the girl he found and won for his bride during a gold prospecting trip in the wilderness of unexplored forest, Indian ambushes and occasional white pioneer settlements which in 1830 comprised East Tennessee.

Many years later, old and gray and alone, Johnson returned to the spot on the Hiwassee river that was the scene of his courtship, reviving in his mind's eye every dear detail of the settlement as he had first seen it, the green grove where stood the Harris cabin and where he had first seen Maggie, the old mill where they had walked on a summer evening. Noting sadly every change, he wrote down his poem to take home to his wife in the East.

The green grove is gone from the hill,
Maggie,
Where first the daisies sprung;
The creaking old mill is still, Maggie,
Since you and I were young.

And now we are aged and gray, Maggie,
The trials of life are done,
Let us sing of the days that are gone,
Maggie,
When you and I were young.

The poem remained unknown until 1886, when the composer, J. A. Butter-field, wrote the music to which it is sung today.

KING ARTHUR

WHETHER King Arthur was a historical figure or not, and scholars are recently renewing research into this fascinating subject, there stand today in Cornwall, England, ruins of an ancient fortress, crowning the promontory Tintagel Head, which are generally known as "King Arthur's Castle." As the birthplace of the glorious King of the Round Table, this spot has recently been transferred to the possession of the English govern-ment to be used as a national park.

If King Arthur was a historical figure he was a comparatively insignificant Cornish chieftain of the early period just succeeding the withdrawal of the Romans. Such a chieftain is celebrated by the Sixth century historian Gildas, in connection with an account of the Battle of Mount Badon in 516, the decisive struggle which checked temporarily the advance of the Saxons against the Celts. Nennius, writing in the Eighth century, calls him by name and attributes to him victory in twelve battles. The date of his death in the battle of Camlan in 537 is added in the Tenth century, Cambrian Annals. By the Twelfth century the Monks Geoffrey of Monmouth and William of Malmesbury were able to produce accounts of his heroism already embellished with much of the legend made familiar by Mallory and Tennyson.

Actually, only the foundations of the chapel of "King Arthur's Castle" date from anything like as early as the Sixth century. The rest of the ruins have been established as Thirteenth century Norman.

Aztec Civilization

The original Aztec civilization was warlike and Spartan; extreme severity marked the penal codes; intemperance, the consuming cancer of the American Indian races, was severely penalized; they were constantly at war with their neighbors, and needed no better pretext for a campaign than the need to capture sacrifices for their gods.

JESUS RAISES LAZARUS FROM THE DEAD

LESSON TEXT—John 11:1-57.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes a Dead Man Live Again.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives Life to His Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Giver of Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Assurance of Im-mortality.

I. Lazarus Sick (vv. 1, 2).

Even those who are in close fellow-ship with the Lord are not immune from sickness.

II. Martha and Mary Send for Jesus (v. 3).

Because they had come to know Jesus as more than a mere man, they instinctively turned to him when the shadow of death fell across their home. Those who receive Jesus into their home when all are well and happy can be sure of his love and sym-phony when sickness and death over-take them.

III. Jesus' Strange Delay (vv. 4-6).

Martha and Mary sent for Jesus be-cause he loved Lazarus. They said, "He whom thou lovest is sick." Ob-serve that when Jesus heard that La-zarus was sick he "abode in the same place" because he loved Lazarus and his sisters (v. 5). This mystery is to be explained by the fact that Jesus was divine and knew all things.

IV. Jesus Goes to the Bethany Home (vv. 7-17).

Jesus knew, and apparently the dis-ciples knew, that going into Judea at that time meant his own death. He told his disciples that his purpose in going was to awaken Lazarus out of his sleep to the intent that they might believe (vv. 11-15). Jesus fearlessly discharged his duty even though his life had been threatened.

V. Jesus Teaching Martha (vv. 18-27).

As he was nearing the village, Mar-tha met him with a complaint because of his delay. He ignored her com-plaint and taught her concerning the resurrection and life.

1. "Thy brother shall rise again" (v. 23). Most blessed words are these to fall upon the ears of a sister sor-rowing for a dead brother.

2. "I am the resurrection and the life" (vv. 25, 26). He is the source of life and all who are joined to him by a living faith experience such a vital fellowship as to be unaffected by any bodily change, death being but an in-cident in the course of an endless life.

VI. Jesus Weeping With Mary (vv. 28-35).

Mary fell at Jesus' feet uttering the same words used by Martha but no doubt with a different tone of voice and attitude. She had been sitting at his feet in the days of sunshine, there-fore, she knew where to go in time of sorrow. Being a real man, he suffered with these bereaved sisters, and though he knew the joy that was so soon to come in the restoration of life to Lazarus, he wept.

VII. Jesus Raising Lazarus (vv. 38-44).

In this stupendous miracle we see an illustration of the quickening into life of those dead in trespasses and sins. Observe:

1. Lazarus was dead (v. 39). This is a type of the sinner dead in tres-passes and sins, even morally corrupt (Eph. 2:1).

2. The stone must be rolled away (v. 39). As Christian workers we should remove every obstacle from be-tween a dead sinner and a life-giving Saviour.

3. Martha's protest of unbelief (v. 39). She insisted that Lazarus had already undergone putrefaction. Christ is able to save the sinner regardless of the degree of his sins.

4. Christ's intimacy and fellowship with the father (v. 42). In his prayer he declared that it was not for his sake that he prayed but for those who stood by.

5. Christ's manner of dealing with Lazarus (v. 43). It was by a call. He is calling men and women today by his Spirit, Word, and providence.

6. The response of Lazarus (v. 44). This shows that the call of Jesus is with authority and power.

7. The command to the people (v. 44). They were to remove the grave clothes and set him free. They could not make Lazarus live, but they could remove the grave clothes which bound the man whom Christ made alive.

VIII. The Effect of This Miracle (vv. 45-57).

1. Some believed (v. 45).
2. His enemies sought to put him to death (vv. 46-53).
3. His withdrawal (v. 54).

Don Quixote fought windmills, but up in San Joaquin valley, Calif., they are using windmills to fight frost. An electrically driven propeller of the type used in large airplanes is mounted on top of a steel derrick. It starts enough breeze to keep the frost off of twenty acres of citrus. Six machines have been in service for some time.

COMFORT for COLICKY BABIES

... THROUGH CASTORIA'S
GENTLE REGULATION

The best way to prevent colic, doctors say, is to avoid gas in stom-ach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste. But remember this: a tiny baby's tender little organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. This is just the time Castoria can help most. Castoria, you know, is made specially for babies and children. It is a pure vege-table preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no nar-cotics. For years it has helped moth-ers through trying times with colicky babies and children suffering with digestive upsets, colds and fever. Keep genuine Castoria on hand, with the name:

LUTHERAN CHURCH
Rev. Paul E. Schauer
New Lenox, Illinois

Divine worship will be conducted Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the English language by the Rev. Paul Schauer of Mokena in the Grace Episcopal church. The Sunday school meets at 1 o'clock. All are welcome!

The sermon will be based on the fourth words spoken by Jesus from the cross: "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" These words show us the intense suffering of Jesus on account of the sins of all mankind, for which He was now paying the penalty. Oh sinner, stop and pause a moment and consider this fact, being forsaken by God! Everyone who refuses to accept Christ Jesus, the Son of God, and believe in Him is and will be forsaken by God. Come and accept Jesus your Savior that you may never be forsaken. Will you not do it today?

cation of a drastic policy of economy from top to bottom of the administrative structure.

The wealth invested in intangible property must be required to pay its just share of taxes. I am for sound and speedy tax reform. The most pressing need of the day is employment for the thousands of men and women who have been thrown out of work due to the industrial depression.

One of the underlying causes of our present depression was poverty on the farm.

Legion Unemployment
Relief Plan

Enclosed find a sketch of the National Plan of the American Legion and other organization's for the relief of unemployment.

It is in form of pertinent questions and answers, and should prove to be a lucid description of the war against depression movement.

When we look back at the supreme sacrifice, in the years of 1917 and 19 to meet a situation of national safety. And we stop to consider that the sacrifice then was to preserve Democracy. And we know that war was fought and won on foreign soil. And we know that America was spared the destruction and devastation of her lands and cities but suffered the loss of thousands of her people and millions of her money. And now we know that in spite of all this glorious and unselfish sacrifice, Democracy again faces a grave situation.

When the safety of Democracy was threatened in the crisis of 1917, what did we as a nation do? We declared war on the forces that threatened the safety of Democracy. We had to choose between two evils the sacrifice of innocent victims of circumstance, or the end of a Democracy on this earth. We chose to fight our fellow man, to kill, to destroy, to violently force the convictions of civilization on those who would tear it down.

While the crisis that Democracy faces today may be just as grave as in 1917, it neither needs or demands the same resistance or action. The war that is going to be waged in this country from now on is a war of mind over matter. Its weapons should be common sense, unselfishness and spiritual application. The strange weapons that have ever been used in warfare, and the absence of the usual horrors of war should make the people of our country even more anxious to pursue it to a victorious end and the assurance of a tangible reward for our efforts to the cause is a forgone conclusion, while the strife of the last decade left the spoils of a mythical ideal.

Harold J. Ferrin, Historical Orland Park Post American Legion.

HOW DOES YOUR
HEATING PLANT
RUN IN S-E-C-O-N-D?

■ It sounds easy to heat a house during a mild winter like the one we've been having. It sounds easy—but it isn't. Furnaces and boilers without automatic control do not operate satisfactorily in "second gear". When the weather is mild, they furnish more warmth than is needed. Houses are overheated . . . and the fuel supply shrinks almost as fast as during a cold winter.

■ Not so, however, when you heat with gas. Gas is ideally suited to any kind of winter. During mild weather or during cold weather, just enough fuel is used to keep the house at a comfortable temperature. Automatically. There is no fuel waste.

■ Remember, it's not too late to begin heating your home with gas this winter. Changing over to gas and having this automatic control simply requires installing a "conversion" burner in the fire box of your present heating plant. For an accurate estimate of what this change-over will cost and what your fuel bills will average over a typical heating season under the recently reduced gas house heating rates . . .

Much Interest Being Taken Here In Race of Carlstrom for Gov.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom has officially announced to the voters of Will County, that he will seek the Republican nomination for governor at the primary election April 12.

In announcing his candidacy to the voters of this community, Attorney General Carlstrom recalled that he withdrew from the gubernatorial race in 1928 in favor of Governor Louis L. Emmerson. Regarding his withdrawal at that time he said:

Regarding 1928 Promises

"I was given definite and specific assurance that the way would be cleared for me this year. If it is necessary, I will give the details of the conference at which that assurance was given me."

Mr. Carlstrom said his platform called for "rigid economy in government, consolidation of taxing bodies, enforcement of personal property tax laws and constitutional amendments to modernize tax machinery and develop other forms of revenue."

Erickson, Boetto Managers

In Will County Gustaf B. Erickson and Francis P. Boetto, assistant attorney generals for this district, are in charge of the Carlstrom campaign. Under their direction Carlstrom groups are being organized throughout the county. They expect to have a Carlstrom organization in each precinct and both Mr. Erickson and Mr. Boetto state that they feel confident of the outcome here.

It is expected that county headquarters will be opened in Joliet by the Carlstrom managers within the next week or ten days.

A reception in honor of the attorney general will be held at the Woodruff hotel in Joliet, March 8, at which time his Will county supporters will have the opportunity to meet the gubernatorial candidate. The following day he will be one of the principle speakers on the program for the state convention of the John Erickson Republican League of Illinois. This convention will be attended by more than 1,000 state and national Republican leaders. C. H. Peterson, president of the Will county club, is in charge of arrangements for the convention.

"I've been CHASING YOU 12 miles...."

to tell You
You've Lost Your Oil"

Two cars raced along the highway east of Abilene, Texas. The second driver finally overtook the leader and signaled to stop.

"I've been chasing you twelve miles to tell you you've lost your oil," he called to J. W. Bell. Mr. Bell found that a rock in the road had knocked a hole in the crankcase, allowing the Conoco Germ Processed Oil to drain out.

But examination of the motor showed no damage done. The "Hidden Quart" had protected the motor!

Only Conoco Germ Processed Oil offers the extra protection of the "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and never drains away. Only Germ Processed Oil actually penetrates and combines with metal surfaces.

You need that extra protection during the starting period, when almost half your motor wear occurs. Oils not Germ Processed drain away, leaving parts unprotected. Germ Processed Oil stays on the job to cut down starting wear, giving your motor longer life, with fewer repair bills. It is the safest, surest lubrication you can buy.

Change to Germ Processed Oil now at the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle.

We neither encourage "dry crankcase" experiments nor guarantee success under all conditions. But unsolicited letters from motorists, now in our files, tell of this and hundreds of other runs with empty crankcases but without damage.

Rhine Fortress Is Weakening

Washington, D. C.—Ehrenbreitstein, frowning fortress on the east bank of the Rhine opposite Koblenz, is weakening. Enemy guns have often shaken the lofty fortress but this time nature is making the attack. Recently huge boulders have loosened from its foundations, leveling vineyards in their path to the highway which they blocked below.

"It is nearly 400 feet to the crest of the rock on which Ehrenbreitstein fortress is perched," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"The north, east and west sides of the rocks are cliffs so precipitous that the fortress is almost unapproachable from these directions. The south side, though it has a winding roadway, also is not easily accessible.

Where Stars and Stripes Flew

The central fort of Ehrenbreitstein thrusts castlelike above the double line of works surrounding it. The fortress is the successor to a Roman fort that crowned the rock centuries ago when Koblenz was a little settlement called Confluentia. A portion of the central fortress now standing has dominated the Rhine valley since the Eleventh century. In 1631 the French occupied the fort for six years. The most recent foreign flag to adorn its ramparts was the Stars and Stripes which fluttered over the fort from December to January, 1923, while it was occupied by the American forces in Germany.

Stars and Stripes Once Flew From Its Ramparts.

"Perhaps few spots in the Rhine valley offer more magnificent panoramas. Above and below Koblenz the Rhine shore line is dotted with quaint villages that resemble pearls strung on a silver string. Their steep backyards are well-kept vineyards that give the river banks the appearance of having recently been combed by a coarse instrument. Topping many rocky summits above the vineyards are castles—some occupied and some in ruins—which once echoed the voices of the great and near great of Europe in celebration of historic events.

"Although the Rhine flows between Koblenz and Ehrenbreitstein, the traveler views the town from such height that it appears almost at its immediate base. Three bridges, one of which is of the pontoon type, span the Rhine at Koblenz.

Old Koblenz Is Hidden.

The city is snugly built between the Moselle and Rhine rivers with a colossal statue of William I mounted on a massive stone foundation, adorning the point where the two rivers meet. From the statue to the end of the city along the Rhine shore, there is a continuous promenade, canopied with shade trees and here and there studded with small flower-filled parks. The land side of the promenade is flanked with villas set in gardens, and quaint eating places, including outdoor cafes. There, while the traveler sips the finest of Rhine wines, he may watch Koblenz stroll at his elbow and the commercial parade on the river beyond.

"What does Koblenz do for a living and 'What happened to the town that was here 2,700 years ago,' are questions visitors ask. One observes few old buildings. There are no sooty smokestacks to mar the skyline punctuated by graceful spires of churches. The quay on the Rhine is clean and devoid of cargo, and warehouses are conspicuously absent from view.

"These questions are not answered until one penetrates the modern city and finds oneself in a small district on the banks of the Moselle beyond the echo of the Rhine. Here commercial Koblenz is abuzz. Barges come and go from the quays, the near-by streets rumble under the pounding steel rims of heavy cart wheels drowning out the noises emanating from piano, paper and dye factories and chemical laboratories. This is commercial Koblenz and ancient Koblenz. Its winding streets and buildings, though not 2,700 years old, have watched the progress of several centuries."

GAMBLING

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

It is wrong to gamble, most people concede, even those mature people who indulge in the pastime themselves. Kayser, who has been caught in a gambling escapade, asks me to explain to him that the practice is contrary to law. There are many things, he points out to me, that the law forbids that are not in themselves wrong, but are taboo because of other considerations.

Kayser is quite familiar with the ten commandments—the eleven, in fact—and he cannot see that gambling in any way violates the commands laid down in these.

Why is gambling wrong if the men concerned in the sport are willing to take the consequences of their wagers?

Well, for one reason, there is seldom an unattached being whose actions concern only himself. Parsons, for instance, who could with difficulty keep himself from the habit, was a young married man with a child as well as his wife to support. He was not risking his own interests alone when he bet upon games or took a hand at poker or played the stock market. He was risking their interests and doing it, too, without their consent. It isn't quite playing the game squarely to do so.

McMasters was talking to a young friend of mine not long ago upon this subject. McMasters is not a young man any more. He has seen a good deal of the world; he has met all sorts of people, and his experiences have been varied. He has seen gambling from the standpoint of the onlooker and from the standpoint of a rather skillful manipulator of the cards.

"I wouldn't gamble, son," he said, "for this reason. If you lose, you usually can't afford it, and if you win you have money for which you have given no return, and money of that sort gives you little pleasure, isn't worth much. It is only the things that you pay full value for that really gives you any real pleasure."

to Wilson, are studied during the college year. Through the activities of these men, each one selected as typical of his period, the students absorb a background knowledge of the various phases of their nation's history—its political, economic and social development.

This biographical approach serves to make history something alive and understandable, rather than a batch of facts to memorize, Doctor Hesselstine finds.

Execution in 1825 Is Recalled by Old Arms

Sword and Rifle Are Treasured by Ohio Man.

New Philadelphia, Ohio.—Destruction and retribution frequently go hand in hand, just as do cause and effect, supply and demand, etc., but not often do you see their actual weapons lying side by side.

At Schoenbrunn Memorial park, just southeast of here, are the two weapons, a rifle and a sword.

Behind the two instruments of oblivion is the story of the only legal hanging in Tuscarawas county, which was attended in grand style by the militia and 5,000 citizens of this vicinity, who turned out for the event.

In 1825 a young mail carrier named Cartwell was shot while traveling a lonely wooded trail, bound from Westchester to Coshocton.

A hunter named Johnson heard the rifle crack, and, hurrying through the brush, found Cartwell dead and the mail bag rifled.

He immediately gave the alarm, and was surprised most unpleasantly when he found himself arrested on circumstantial evidence and brought to Tuscarawas county jail, in New Philadelphia. Here he was charged with the murder.

Footprints of a man on the scene, however, did not coincide with Johnson's tracks, and, in accordance with a suggestion from the accused man, the entire male population was ordered to assemble on a certain day ostensibly to have their feet examined.

Johnson hoped by this method to identify the man whom he remembered having seen emerging stealthily out of the woods the day of the murder and whom he then had taken for another hunter.

After scanning many faces Johnson suddenly pointed to John Funston, exclaiming, "That is the man!"

"You are a liar!" Funston answered, but even as he spoke sweat gathered on his brow, his lips trembled and his face paled. Johnson was released.

Later, after Funston was tried and convicted, he broke down and admitted the fowling piece found near the mail carrier's body was his.

A gallows immediately was erected along the intersection of West High and Tuscarawas avenues. Postbox, a station on the Cleveland-Marietta railroad between Newcomerstown and Cambridge, now marks the site.

Painless Way to Study History Quite Popular

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Dr. William B. Hesselstine has developed a "painless" method of teaching American history. For three years now the youthful head of the University of Chattanooga history department has offered a biography course as introductory to the study of the history of these United States. He calls it "representative Americans." The class is filled to capacity each semester.

Members of the "representative Americans" class read biographies and listen to lectures on the lives of typical Americans instead of forcing themselves through the usual admittedly tedious study of a textbook, with its confusion of dates, wars and facts.

Denver Boy is a Winner

Every mother realizes how important it is to teach children good habits of conduct but many of them fail to realize the importance of teaching their children good bowel habits.

Watch your child and at the first sign of constipation, give him a little California Fig Syrup. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it quickly drives away those distressing ailments, such as headaches, bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness, feverishness, fretfulness, etc. It gives them a hearty appetite, regulates their stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord. For over fifty years, leading physicians have prescribed it for half-sick, bilious, constipated children. More than 4 million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it.

Mrs. C. G. Wilcox, 3855 1/2 Wolf St., Denver, Colorado, says: "My son, Jackie, is a prize winner for health, now, but we had a lot of trouble with him before we found his trouble was constipation and began giving him California Fig Syrup. It fixed him up quick, gave him a good appetite, made him sleep fine and he's been gaining in weight right along since the first few days, taking it."

To avoid inferior imitations of California Fig Syrup, always look for the word "California" on the carton.

Surnames at Standstill

Surnames are not multiplying at any great rate at the present time. The civilized nations of the world have adopted surnames of the past and changes are infrequent. In the United States, foreigners who become naturalized often change their names or Anglicize them.

According to a survey by Joseph W. THE STORY

Six bandits hold up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackenzie, kill Jimmy Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs. At the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance, Sgt. Alan Baker disputes with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, regarding plans for the capture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at the news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stolen furs are found on the MacMillan place and evidence points to Joyce's father. Alan leads his expedition up the big Alooska. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan fails to capture the bandits, and returns to Fort Endurance. Haskell blames him for the failure and Alan is allowed to buy out of the Mounted on condition that he absolve Haskell from blame. Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe. He meets "Buzzard" Featherfoot, famous aviator, and enlists him in the enterprise. "Slob-ice" Jensen, leader of the bandits, plans to capture Joyce. Haskell suspects Alan's plans.

"Snakes!" Bill breathed to himself, as he thanked Haskell and went out the door. "That Spring-heel Johnny must be winding up to ask a favor of me, or something. But I've got my three days to help Alan out. Lord, I hope Alan shows up during my free time. He might maybe let me go along on his trick."

With no suspicion of the ugly truth, he turned up the twilight slope.

When Whipple came in, Haskell ordered him to close the door and pull down the window, to guard against possible eavesdropping. Then he tersely explained the situation. He added:

"Hardsock will probably steal some more gasoline and oil tonight. What he's already stolen isn't enough for a plane to do much maneuvering on. I want you to watch him stealing that stuff so that you can later be a witness. He'll probably have time to take those drums only a couple miles from here tonight. Tomorrow he'll take all of it on to the place where he's to meet Baker. He's been sneaking it away little by little when he had the chance, and hiding it close by; but during his three days he'll take it to the meeting place."

"You go down to the river bank now to those two tepees and get that Indian called Ogi-Tomax. You remember Hardsock thrashed him one time last winter for carrying a squaw-club and beating his wife. He's got a grudge against Hardsock, he'll have a personal interest in this, he's just the man we want. Take a carton of my cigarettes with you and a little rum as a silence present. I'll personally pay him five dollars a day. Do you understand so far?"

Whipple nodded. Haskell went on: "You and the Indian are to shadow Hardsock tonight and tomorrow. Find out where he's taking that stuff and where he's going to meet Baker. As soon as you do that, whip back here and report to me."

It was late the next evening before Whipple returned. He came back tired, bedraggled, but with electric news.

He and the Indian had watched Bill steal more gas and oil from the stores. He had shadowed him to the temporary cache two miles up the Mackenzie. There he had loaded his canoe to the gunwales with the drums and cans and had taken them all to a big lake twenty miles up the river.

He had cached the fuel on a headland called Goose point; and was waiting there without the faintest suspicion that he had been trailed and was being watched. The Indian, lying low back in the willows, was keeping an eye on him.

As Haskell listened to the report, he forgot the haggard day and night just passed. He had scarcely dared hope for such news as this.

After careful thought, guarding against any slip-up, he ordered Whipple: "Go get your rifle and belt-gun. I'll take mine, too. We'll go up there in the launch. You can drive it. We'll capture Hardsock and those supplies. That'll be that. Then we'll wait there. The plane'll be alone in a couple days. We'll keep the launch in cover close by. When the machine lights down and they go ashore to get the supplies, we'll ram it and put it out of commission. Then we'll have Baker and this Featherfoot—and we'll put them where the dogs won't bite 'em!"

After his despair of their last week, after his helpless festering anger at Baker, it was a new lease on hope to know he was going to smash Baker's venture and throw him into prison and make his marriage to Elizabeth impossible! Baker was walking all unknowingly into a deadly trap. Walking into arrest and criminal disgrace and prison. He would be lucky to get off with a sentence of two years. That was the statute minimum for his offense.

Buckling on his belt-gun, Haskell snuffed the candles and went out of his cabin—on the easiest, most exultant, most deadly certain trip he had ever made.

CHAPTER IX

Wings Over the Wilderness

On that first day of flight, as dawn broke full and the sun chased away a layer of gossamer clouds beneath the White Speedair, Alan looked down with marveling eyes at a strange panorama. Evergreen forestry, silvery lakes and silvery network of rivers far below, swam past at a speed to amaze him. In thirty minutes he was covering a distance which would take a whole day's hard traveling by canoe or komatik.

Knowing that if he and Buzzard showed up at a police post or larger trading center, it would mean a quick and sorry end of their flight, Alan planned to avoid such places religiously. He had a conviction that he and Buzzard were "wanted." They had left too many tracks in Edmonton—claws that would speedily be followed up. The police there, a wise live outfit, had certainly connected them with the theft of all that government property and had radioed instructions for their arrest.

Eventually he and Buzzard were going to be caught. It was as inevitable as sunset. Soon or late they would have to return to civilization and face the music. To Alan the worst of it was that Buzzard was going to pay a heavy price for helping him on this thankless job. For himself he did not greatly care; he hardly thought of it. . . . He was headed north again, on his last patrol, his greatest patrol.

As they worked on north, they made moderately good time, but only by incessant care and worry. Engine trouble caused them delay. Again and again they sat down on some unknown river or lake and sweated for hours over the old motor. Fuel was a constant problem. Avoiding Mounted detachments and Royal Signal corps stations like the plague, they dared stop only at wilderness-buried posts where radios were unlikely and no police handy. They could never be certain of getting fuel, and what they did get was usually half kerosene.

Alan was looking forward to his rendezvous with Bill as the end of all this worry about gas and oil. Besides the fuel there at Goose point, Bill had promised to cache some supplies up the Alooska near Joyce's home.

Alan was fervently looking ahead to meeting Bill at En Traverse lake, to getting those precious supplies, to seeing Joyce again there on the Big Alooska. All of his loyalty to the sister of his dead partner could not keep him from comparing Joyce's vital spirited personality with Elizabeth's leisure-bored ennui, and Joyce's two years of heroic sacrifice with Elizabeth's idle deliberate dependence.

On their last evening, worn out by a day of engine trouble and head winds and blinding rains, they alighted in a little spruce-buried lake on Silver-tip river, a short hundred miles south of Fort Endurance. Anchoring the plane, they paddled ashore, cooked a warm meal, and rolled up in their blankets for a few hours of desperately needed rest.

"Tomorrow's the day of days," Buzzard remarked, thinking of the supplies and a base to maneuver from.

"It's the day of days," Alan agreed, but he was thinking of Joyce running down the path, bareheaded in the sun, to greet them. Tomorrow he would know if she was safe. Tomorrow, after the rendezvous with Bill, the White Speedair would be dropping down upon the Big Alooska.

Buzzard was asleep almost instantly, but Alan, tossing in a useless attempt to sleep, finally got up, built a tiny fire, and sat beside it, thinking, a dead pipe in his teeth.

As he sat there under the solemn spruces, he tried to look steadily at his looming marriage to Elizabeth, and decide his course. No longer blinded by idealization of her as a girl, he saw now, with pitiless insight, that all along she had not wanted him unless he had a good income and was out of the North. She might love him as well as she had ever loved anybody; but to her he was not greatly more than a means of getting what she wanted out of life.

The prospect of marrying her, when his respect was gone, made Alan wince. And his respect was gone with a vengeance. Those moments in the cabin, when she offered herself to him, had been a shock and revelation. She had acted not out of excusable passion, not out of love, but as a guarantee that he would take that Victoria job. He thought of the incident with something of revulsion.

Now he was groping to see the honest and righteous thing for him to do. He wondered whether it would be courage, or a weak yielding to desire, for him to break with Elizabeth and sweep aside the obligations binding him. There was right on both sides. Elizabeth was waiting for him; he had promised to marry her and take her out; he had burned his bridges and committed himself to that Victoria job. Yet it was wrong to enter a loveless marriage that would bring tragic unhappiness. It was wrong to marry Elizabeth when his whole-hearted respect and love went out to Joyce MacMillan.

In the lonely anguish of his thoughts he laid his decision more or less in the hands of time. He felt he must see Joyce again before he could take a decisive step. If he did capture those six criminals and so cleared her father, she would be grateful with all her heart. He meant to tell her about the tragic happening which had bound him to Elizabeth. If he could win back that old intimate comradeship with her and they could begin anew, then the righteous thing was to put Joyce's happiness above Elizabeth's.

A little after gray dawn Alan rebuilt the fire, cooked breakfast, and reluctantly awakened his partner.

Later, when they skirled out to the plane, Buzzard glanced at the tanks and remarked tersely:

"I hope your buddy, this Hardsock, has got some gas and oil out to that lake. It'll be our finish if he hasn't." "Bill will have it there," Alan assured. "He may not be there himself, he's probably on duty; but we agreed exactly where to cache it. It'll be waiting for us."

They climbed in, taxied twice around the lake to warm the spluttering motor, took off and headed north toward Goose point at Lake En Traverse.

With the heavy rains stopped and the insect scourges abating, Alan knew the bandits were on the move again or shortly would be. When they did stir, he wanted to be there on the Big Alooska to look out for Joyce.

Ever since he came to believe that Dave MacMillan knew nothing of the crime, he had been puzzling about that pack of stolen furs. Something dark and sinister lay behind that pack. There was some connection between the trader and those criminals. But what?

Alan reasoned: "Those furs didn't get in that shed by accident. Those men might have had a grudge against Dave MacMillan and planted them there. They might have figured he'd show them to us and get in hot water. That guess is at least possible. If it's true, then their grudge might lead them to strike at Joyce."

If they intended anything against Joyce, they doubtlessly would attempt it just before they started eastward on their trek through the Great Barrens and Strong-Woods. Alan had dreamed of that, dreamed of her being captured and taken along, as the bandits had captured Margaret Fournier.

With Haskell refusing to extend her any protection whatsoever, Alan felt that he and she alone stood between her and a terrible danger. If anything happened to the plane, or to him and Buzzard. . .

Religious and Secular Stories That Parallel

All the great religions have stories that parallel each other in some degree. For instance, Jephthah, one of the judges of Israel, made a remarkable vow before he marched against the Ammonites, that if he proved victorious he would offer to the Lord the first living thing which should come to meet him on his return. This happened to be his only daughter, whom he sacrificed to fulfill his rash vow. The history of Jephthah is contained in the second book of Judges. Idomeneus, in Homeric legend, king of Crete, succeeded his father Deucalion on the throne, and accompanied the Greeks to the Trojan war with a fleet of 90 ships. During this war he rendered himself famous by his valor. While returning, he made a vow to Neptune in a dangerous tempest that if he escaped he would offer to the god whatever living creature first presented itself to his eye on the Cretan shore. This was his son, who came to congratulate him on his safe return. Idomeneus redeemed his promise, but the inhumanity of this sacrifice rendered him so odious to his subjects that he was exiled from his country.—Montreal Family Herald.

Virgin Islands

Columbus discovered the Virgin Islands on his second voyage in 1493. It is said, amazed at the number, he feared there would not be enough saints names to go around, so he put them under the sacred patronage of the 11,000 martyred virgins of St. Ursula.

Business Cycles

Authorities on economics state the business cycle occurs in distinct periods—first, the crisis, the turning point which marks the collapse of the period of prosperity, usually initiated by a buyers' strike as a reaction from high prices; second, emergency liquidation; third, depression; fourth, readjustment; fifth, recuperation; sixth, prosperity, and seventh, overextension and speculation.

Fame at the cost of honor is dearly bought.

A Protective Food

The importance of cod liver oil of high vitamin test was recently stressed in a Government pamphlet, Emergency Food Relief and Child Health. "An indispensable food for young children," it characterized this valuable oil, rich in Vitamins A and D. Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is a pleasing, palatable way of taking this great "protective food." In it, children gain a store of resistance-building and bone-developing vitamins. Official Records

Estimated expenditures this year	$637,719.50
Receipts this year itemized as follows:
County tax	$570,078.25
Receipts from other sources	estimated 100,000.00
Total receipts	$670,078.25
Excess revenue over exp.	32,358.75 or 5%

Committee's Figures

Estimated expenditures this year	$638,519.50
Total receipts	468,537.41
Estimated expenditures over taxes this year	$169,982.09 or 36%

"This item shows a difference of $202,340.84. The official records show that we should have excess revenue to the extent of 5%, while the Committee's figures would lead you to believe we would have a deficit of 36% or, in other words, go in the red $169,982.09.

"There is one other matter I would like to comment on, and that is tax reduction. The Board of Review contemplated a general reduction a year ago, 1930, but did not take action on it then, because we knew that 1931 was the quadrennial and that by making the adjustment in 1931, it would stand for the next four years. Therefore, when the Board of Review met last June, one of our first acts was to set the machinery in motion to accomplish a general reduction. The point I am driving at is that tax reduction was sponsored by the Board of Review long before any concerted effort was made in this direction by any other agency. As Chairman of the Board of Review, I do not expect any glory for my part in reducing the taxes of the taxpayers, and I am sure that the other members feel likewise. The members of the Board of Review looked upon it as strictly a matter of duty, to give any relief within their power to the overburdened taxpayer at this time. The percentage of reduction was little enough, and I only regret that it could not have been far greater. I might say here that the amount of saving in taxes is $386,110.48 instead of $981,968.28 as reported.

"In commenting on this, all I can say is that I feel that the publishing of such data without giving the full details is doing this Board a gross injustice. This is a representative form of government and as such the people are entitled to true facts, just as nearly as it is humanly possible for this Board or any other agency to give it to them."

TINLEY PARK

OBITUARY

Thomas Charles Davis, of Tinley Park, Ill., was born near Montezuma, Iowa, Jan. 29, 1872. He was the son of Andrew and Sarah McVey Davis, who were residents of Montezuma for many years. His father died in 1917. Tom attended the public schools and grew to manhood in this community, and on March 15, 1899 was happily married to Lillian Malcolm. He was a construction engineer and it was his privilege to be sent to many parts of the United States and to Canada by his company.

For the last thirteen years he has been a resident of Tinley Park a suburb of Chicago.

He had been in ill health for a number of years and was persuaded by his sister, Mrs. Henry Zirbel of Newton, to bring Mrs. Davis and spend the winter with her, and she with Mrs. Davis tenderly cared for him during his last illness of a few weeks duration. He bore with patience and fortitude his affliction, and on the day before his death greeted friends with a smile, and said, "I think I'm better," but the tired body was too frail, and on Sunday, Feb. 14th, 1932, with a smile on his lips he passed to his reward at the age of 60 years. Tom was a genial happy disposition and many hearts have been made happier by having passed his way.

He leaves to mourn his passing his beloved wife, his mother, Mrs. Sarah Davis of Leonia, N. J., two sisters, Mrs. Fred Clarke of Leonia, N. J. and Mrs. Zirbel of Newton; four nieces, Mrs. Floyd Salmon and Lillian Zirbel of Newton, Anne Isabel Jones of Montezuma, Helen Clarke of Leonia, N. J., one nephew, Don Zirbel of Newton and one grand niece, Miriam Salmon of Newton.

He was a member of the Methodist church of Montezuma for 38 years and also a member of the Iowa Consistory No. 2, the El Kahir Shrine, Cedar Rapids, Lafayette Lodge No. 52 A. F. and A. M., and the O. E. S., No. 232 of Montezuma.

 Be undismayed; and know

Spring will not come less sweetly
 Because her step is slow.

Strange Animal Captured by Boys Near Goeselville

On Washington's Birthday, Jack Sauer, Walter Foskett and Willard Huels, while roaming through the woods near 143rd St. and Ridgeland Ave., were attracted to a large hollow tree lying on the ground, by the terrific barking of their dogs.

They at first thought they had a coon, but soon found out that it was a most formidable animal, for as fast as the dogs would enter the tree, they would come out howling, with scratched noses and faces. One of the dogs nearly lost his eye.

The boys procured some heavy gunny sacks and started a fire in one end of the tree and succeeded in smoking the animal out into the sack. In some manner the animal tore open the sack with its most powerful and sharp claws, ripping off the pant legs of one of the boys and escaped back into the tree. The boys then used two sacks doubled up and were then able to capture the animal again after a desperate struggle.

They have the animal in a cage and probably will sell it to a Chicago party who has offered five dollars for it as they claim it is a Badger and they want to use it to give a "Bager Party" before a prominent club in Chicago.

MOKENA

At the village board meeting on Wed. night mayor J. C. Nielsen read a report he had compiled showing income of the village from taxes, licenses and other sources to be over $5,000 annually and then gave a list of fixed expenses and showed that by careful management there would be enough surplus left with which to stone the village streets.

Mayor Nielsen urged that this be done this year and the board decided to hold a special meeting next Tuesday night to determine which streets are to be stoned this year and the specifications required. The job will be done by contract after bids have been advertised for.

Representatives from the Consumers Stone Co., of Chicago were present and said that at a rough estimate it would cost approximately $2000 to build a mile of macadam road 12 feet wide and 8 inches deep. This would not include cost of grading and making shoulders. Henry Yunker was present and said Alderman Hensel was in error when he said that Mr. Yunker had told him that he would stone all the streets in the village except Front street for $1500, because the freight alone on the stone required would be $1800. Mr. Yunker said that what he meant was that he would do the work pay the freight and furnish the stone, if the village would pay him $1500 yearly on the amount of the total bill until it was paid for with six per cent interest.

It looks as though Mokena was going to be pulled out of the mud.

Mrs. W. E. McCleery entertained the 500 club in her home Wednesday afternoon.

A number of Mokena friends helped Mr. Walter McGoveny celebrate his 70th birthday, Sunday.

A permanent wave demonstration was given Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Wm. Semmler by Mrs. Nan Rice of Tinley Park.
